Endranking without qualification.

Tournament average (without qualification): 19,75 (12309 / 623)

It was the first world championship played with anchors. In professional tournaments, however, the anchor had long been introduced.

On 16/17 December 1923, the first World Billiards Federation (FIAB) was founded. Thus for the organization of the world championships the arrangements, negotiations and competitions of the national federations were no longer the crucial instance, only the world federation as highest instance was essential.

There was a qualification in advance to determine two players who played the final round with four finalists already determined. One qualifier was determined in each against each mode with three participants (Charles Darantière, Jacques Léger, Emile Garric). The second place in the final round was decided by a match between Albert Corty and Charles Fougeret.
