In addition to the unrest and loudness of the spectators, which were quite common in Southern Europe and South America at that time, it was the times of the start of the matches that were fixed by draw and caused problems for some players. For example, René Vingerhoedt had to play three times in a row at 02:15 in the morning.

René Vingerhoedt and especially Enrique Navarra were known for their defensive play. Malicious tongues said especially Navarra that he even played the opening shot on swearing.
