Details

Due to massive disputes within the world governing body, the “Union Internationale des Fédérations d’Amateurs de Billard” (UIFAB), over leadership style and sports policy, a second organization was founded: the “Fédération Internationale de Billard” (FIB), which held a parallel title match in the balkline 71/2 format one month later. Consequently, only players from certain nations competed in each event. Starting in 1958, there was once again only one European Championship.
